DATA ANALYTIC SKILLS

Design & Methodology

Sample Size Estimation (e.g., Monte Carlo). Determine sample size needed to achieve sufficient precision (e.g., bias and coverage) and power of parameter estimates based on assumed population values

Mixed Methods Integration. Merge qualitative and quantitative research data across levels (e.g., design level, methods level) and dimensions (e.g., relational, methodological) to provide a more comprehensive understanding of research findings

Data Management & Diagnostics

Data Screening, Visualization, and Regression Diagnostics. Ensure data quality (e.g., outliers, multicollinearity) and check validity of assumptions (e.g., linearity, homoscedasticity) for regression models

Missing Data Treatment. Handle incomplete datasets using modern methods like Multivariate Imputation by Chain Equations (MICE) or Full Information Maximum Likelihood (FIML).

Statistical Analysis & Modeling

Generalized Linear Models (GLM). Analyses for non-normally distributed data, such as outcomes that are categorical, counts, or binary (e.g., logistic regression)

Multivariate Analysis of Variance and Covariances (MANOVA/MANCOVA). Compare means across different groups and controlling for extraneous variables (covariates)

Mediation, Moderation, Conditional Process Analysis, and Path Analysis.

Test mediation and moderation effects, including when these concepts are combined in more complex path analytic models.

Psychometrics. Develop and validate tests, surveys, and questionnaires to ensure they are reliable and valid for the intended population using factor analytic and item response theory strategies.

Structural Equation Modeling (SEM). Test theoretical relationships between hypothesized constructs via reflective, formative, composite models. This includes examining mean structures and latent growth models.

Latent Class Analysis (LCA). Estimate latent class and latent class regression models for polytomous outcome variables, including covariates and moderation effects.

Multilevel Modeling. Test fixed effects, random effects, and cross-level interactions between level-1 and level-2 predictors in clustered datasets.
